Although the market for the week shows some improvement the same hand-to-mouth transactions, which have been the character of the trading in the local print cloth market, hap been contained during the present week. The sensationally high cotton market has reflected a muon traier tone in the market for the missed articles, especially for wide goods, which have been unif for the past few months.

THE TOBACCO MARKET.

Season Opens With Fairly Good Prices-Big Breaks This Week. The season on the Richmond tobacco market has at last opened, and some heavy breaks are expected during the coming week.

Up to this time only primings have coming week.

Up to this time only primings have been sold, and very bad primings at that. The quality of the tobacco has been poor and the prices correspondingly low. On Thursday, however, larger quantities of the new crop began to appear. The weather had been fine and the farmers had had good opportunity to "make good." The familiar sight of the high-piled wagons just in from the country began to be witnessed again and it was apparent that the long awaited opening of the season had occurred. Yesterday Shelburne's Warehouse sold seven or eight wagons and some of the other warehouses made offerings. Everything is now being gotten ready for next week when the warehousemen expect to get down to work in earnest. The receipts during the week with probably be very large.

The prices at the opening of the market are reported to be good. Shelburne sold as low as $2.00 or indifferent primings, and as high as $11.50 for some fairly good lots of sun-dured. As a general thing, the tobacco was rather light in body, and, therefore, poor in quality. Much dissatisfaction is expressed by farmers at the prices being received. Many of them declared that they would stop raising tobacco ditogether if their lands were good for anything else. A prominent member of the Legislature, who is a large planter, announced a few days ago that he was seriously contemplating offering a bill designed to prevent farmers from raising more than a certain quantity of tobacco. Then the size of the crop would be reduced and prices would go up again. In the bright belt, in North Carolina, the same conditions obtain. One of the most prominent of the tobacco raising farmers writes that he has decided to atop planting tobacco and that he has locked up his present crop until prices go up.

A notabe feature of the local trade conditions is very remarkable run of activity on the independent manufacturers. Each one of them reports an unusually fine one of them reports an unusually fine trade. One manager declares that he has been forced by orders to revive old brands that went out of existence five years ago.

An excellent run of business keeps the produce market active, but uneventful. The trade is good, but there is no special feature to it in any direction.

Owing to the warm weather, which rather hindered the hunters, game is coming in, but slowly. Much of it that comes, owing to the heat, has been in bad condition. The cold spell that has set in, however, will have a beneficial effect here, as it will upon the trade conditions in general. Rabbits are selling at 12 to 15 cents, according to the quality; partridges, at 12 to 15 cents; pheasants, at 40 to 60 cents; wild turkeys, at 11 to 12 cents, and whole deer, at 11 cents.

Turkeys are still very scarce. They are are not much in demand; they go at 9 to 10 cents.

Eggs are still very scarce. They are selling now at 24 to 25 cents. Butter is selling moderately well at 13 to 18 cents per nound.

Cabage are here in fine quality and quantity. They sell at 35 per 100 or $15 to $16 per ton.

There are indications that the apple crop is about played out. The prices are expected to advance also on account of the cold weather. Choice annies in large lots are selling at $2 to $2.25 per barrel; fair to good, $1.50 to $1.75; common, $1 to $1.25.
